New Eight-Hour Law in Arizona

May Cause Friction. In a recent issue of that paper, the editor of the Mining and Scientific Press, reviews the labor situation throughout the country and finds that nowhere in the mining states of the west is there any friction of consequence between the miners and oper-ators, except in one instance; but goes on to say that the outlook in Arizona and California is not promising at the present time and offers a word of caution. The paper says:

"There are at present said to be more idle men in industrial lines than at any time since the coal strike of 1902. The number is estimated at more than 50,000, mostly in the states east of the Rocky mountains. On the Pacific coast there are a few hundred railroad and other laborers idle-on strike. In the mines of the west, however, there is no disturbance of moment, except in the coal mines on Vancouver Island.

"In Arizona the eight-hour law passed by the last territorial legislature be-comes operative June 1, and the developments of the immediate future are looked forward to with some concern by mine managers and owners in that ers should they attempt to insist upon putting the law into active operation, but miners throughout the territory have been notified that beginning June I wages will be reduced 25 to 50 cents per wages will be reduced 25 to 50 cents per day, the present rate being $2.75 and $3.50. This step was taken at a recent meeting of the Mac Operators' associa-tion, presumably in anticipation of the proposed eight-hour day. The conven-tion of the Western Federation of Min-ers, in session at Denver, Colo., has instructed delegates from Arizona to ac cept no reduction in wages, consequentthe outlook for continued prosperity in Arizona is not bright.

"In California the miners in Calaveras and Amador by the recent strike se-cured a nine-hour day for 10 hours' pay, and it is now stated to be the intention to demand an eight-hour day for the same pay. They are in the meantime strengthening their organization, and notices have been posted in the several mining towns and at the mines, in the English, Italian and Austrian languages, directing all men employed in or about the mines who have not already joined the union to at once affiliate themselves with some labor organization, or they will be boycotted as

There are few of the mines in the district affected by this movement that can afford any additional expense, and a demand for still shorter hours would indoubtedly result in closing some of the mines of the district, with the fur-ther probability that in the case of some of them they would not again be re-opened by the present generation. "In view of the present situation, it is hoped that wiser counsel will prevail and that the miners will see the inadexpense under which these mines are already struggling."
